

Cured to Stay Cured.

How a Barre Citizen Found Complete Freedom From Kidney Troubles.

If you suffer from backache—From urinary disorders—From any disease of the kidneys, Be cured to stay cured.

Doan's Kidney Pills make lasting cures.

Barre people testify.

Here's one case of it:

Mrs. Anna Gibbs, 31 Brooklyn St., Barre, Vt., says: "For over a year I had more or less backache, as the result of disordered kidneys. If I brought a strain on the muscles of my back, sharp pains seized me and I was also annoyed by headaches and dizzy spells. Whenever I overworked or caught cold, my suffering was worse. I had read a great deal about Doan's Kidney Pills and deciding to try them, I procured a box at Dr. Brown's Drug store. Before I had finished the contents, the pains in my back were relieved and I felt better in every way. I am only too glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills." (Statement given Nov. 10, 1905.)

Re-endorsement.

Mrs. Gibbs was interviewed on May 25, 1911, and she said: "I value Doan's Kidney Pills as highly as ever and can still give them my recommendation. I have had no serious attacks of kidney trouble since giving my former statement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Helps a Judge in Bad Fix.

Justice Eli Cherry of Gillis Mills, Tenn., was plainly worried. A bad sore on his leg had baffled several doctors and long resisted all remedies. "I thought it was a cancer," he wrote. "At last I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve and was completely cured." Cures burns, boils, ulcers, cuts, bruises and piles. 25 cents at the Red Cross Pharmacy.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

"The Chocolate Soldier," Brightest and Best of All Operas, Wednesday Night.

Brightest and best of all light operas that have filled the American and European continents with their tuneful echoes since the days of Gilbert and Sullivan in "The Chocolate Soldier," the well-known work of Oscar Straus, leader of Vienna's musical circles, who has contrived to embody the spirit of the romantic comedy-satire, "Arms and the Man" of George Bernard Shaw in melodies that are yet on the lips of millions.

Still on the pinnacle of its popularity under the finished presentation of the Whitney Opera company, "The Chocolate Soldier" is marching into town to be reviewed by the theatregoers of this city at the opera house on Wednesday night, May 15. At the time of the arrival of "The Chocolate Soldier" on these shores three seasons ago, the American light operatic field was so over-run with weeds in the shape of tenth-rate musical shows furnished with shabby music and paltry plots, that the flower of Viennese opera might have been expected to droop and wither before audiences that were flatteringly prejudiced against anything in an operatic guise. A less courageous manager might have hesitated. The result more than justified his venture. New York's most conservative and skeptical critics vied with each other in doing honor to the lyric fertility of Straus' genius. The night before the first American performance of "The Chocolate Soldier" a comic opera was regarded as a dead issue. The morning after, every lay and professional devotee of the theatre saw the dawn of a new era for light opera on the horizon. Mr. Whitney and "The Chocolate Soldier" had won the battle. The opportunities for a manager to distinguish himself in presenting the strange foreign beauties of Bulgarian landscapes and interiors to a New York audience are unlimited, and in staging "The Chocolate Soldier," Mr. Whitney is conceded to have reached a new high-water mark for richness and faithfulness of scenic equipment. The Whitney Opera company is one fully capable of meeting both the dramatic and operatic demands made upon them by the lively, colorful libretto taken from Shaw's play and all the various moods, gay and grave, satiric and sentimental, in which Oscar Straus couched his irresistible melodies. Prominent in the cast are: Alice York, Juanita Fletcher, Mildred Rogers, Charles Purcell, Francis Boyle, Blanche Chase, George O'Donnell, Bessie Lyons and George Tallman.

Love Matches.

"I argued and wrangled about love matches with Miss Marie Correll one whole day in her old fashioned Stratford home," said a prominent woman magazine writer, "but she rather got the better of me at the end with an epigram: 'She who marries for love,' Miss Correll said, 'enters heaven with her eyes shut. She who marries without love enters hell with them open.'"

Mixed Metaphors.

"Jorkins certainly did get all mixed up when somebody asked if he hadn't some unpleasant family secrets hidden."

"What did he say?"

"He said he was ready to admit his family had their skeleton in a closet and would make no bones about it either."—Baltimore American.

CHURCH STEEPLES.

And the Ancient Mountain Peak Shrines of the Storm God.

There is a theory which finds the spire of the New England meeting house in the mountain peaks of Arabia.

Tracing back the process of evolution, we come first to London, where the clean sweep of the great fire gave Sir Christopher Wren his opportunity to experiment in steeples, and then Venice, where the campanile is a shining example of a tower beside a church, but separate from it, and then to Alexandria, where the famous lighthouse on the Isle of Pharos contributed to the religion of Mohammed both the form and the name of the minaret, and then to the tower of Babel at Borsippa and the zikkurats of the temples of Babylonia and Assyria. A zikkurat is a huge quadrangular mass of brick, rising in diminishing stories—as a child places a big block on the floor and puts a smaller one on it and on that a smaller still—and ascended by a winding balustraded stair to a shrine on top.

This, according to the theory, was the ritual equivalent of a mountain.

Into the flat lands between the Tigris and Euphrates came the ancestors of the Babylonians and Assyrians out of the mountains of Arabia. There they had worshipped the storm god, who dwelt upon the heights among the clouds, with whom they communed, like Moses, by climbing up and making their offerings and saying their prayers upon the summit. And because there were no mountains in their new country they erected beside every temple a little mountain in the yard. Thus the zikkurat, and then the minaret, and then the campanile and then the steeple of the parish church.—George Hodges in Atlantic Magazine.

TANGIER ISLAND.

Where the People Do Without Jails, Lawyers, Horses and Cows.

There is a little island in Chesapeake bay, 125 miles south of Baltimore, where the world has stood still for more than a hundred years. Tangier island is five miles long and much less than a mile wide, but more than 1,500 people live on it. There is only one street, nine feet wide, without sidewalks, and the houses are all built along this street with narrow canals of the deep water of the bay between each two houses. There is only one church, presided over by a Methodist minister, and only one doctor, and there is no cemetery, the dead of each family being buried in the yard. There is no newspaper, no jail, no lockup and no lawyers nor any need for them. Everybody is deeply religious, and profanity is punished with a fine imposed by the dean of the church.

The men go fishing and crabbing in sailboats early on Monday mornings and do not come home until Saturdays, when they have marketed their sea harvests in towns on the mainland. There are no gardens, no horses or cows, but plenty of chickens are raised. Fuel is supplied to the islanders by sloops, which come very month or so loaded with wood and anchor off Tangier, sending small boats piled with cordwood and kindlings to every house by means of the little canals. The women wear sunbonnets and go barefooted, and there is an organ in nearly every home. Tangier was first settled by white people in 1606 and before that time was occupied by the Indians.—Exchange.

Barring the Evil Spirits.

The Chinese believe that evil spirits are able to move only in straight lines and that they cannot penetrate through solid matter; therefore the problem of keeping them out of a dwelling or a garden seems to them a simple matter. On passing through the entrance of the ordinary middle class home in China it is necessary to turn to the right or left because of a fixed screen, the purpose of which, according to Popular Mechanics, is to keep evil spirits out. Likewise just at the back of the entrance to a walled garden may sometimes be found another wall erected for the same purpose.

KOREANS ARE GLUTTONS.

Always Ready to Eat and Always Gorge Themselves When They Can.

The Koreans appear to be the greatest eaters in the world. To this the Japanese, French, English, Dutch and Chinese all bear witness. All reports concerning the Korean capacity for food seem to agree. In this respect there is not the least difference between the rich and the poor, the noble and the plebeian. To eat much is an honor in Korea, and the merit of a feast, it would seem, consists not so much in the quality as in the quantity of the food served. Little conversation occurs during the Korean meal, for each sentence might lose a mouthful. A Korean is always ready to eat. He attacks whatever he meets with and rarely cries "Enough." Even between meals he will help himself to anything edible that is offered.

The ordinary portion of a laborer is about a quart of rice, which when cooked makes a good bulk. This, however, is no serious hindrance to his devouring double or treble the quantity when he can get it. Eating matches are common. When an ox is slaughtered and the beef is served up a heaping bowl of the steaming mess does not alarm any guest. When fruits, such as peaches or small melons, are served it is said that they are devoured without peeling. Twenty or thirty peaches are deemed an ordinary allowance per person and rapidly disappear. Such prodigality in food is, however, not common, and for one feast there are many fastings. The Koreans are neither fastidious in their eating nor painstaking in their cooking. Nothing goes to waste. All is glist that comes to the mill in their mouths.—New York Press.

Musical Troubles.

Little Harold had just begun the study of music, and a visitor asked how he was getting along.

"All right," he replied, "only I have trouble with the sharks and flaps."—Chicago News.

DYNAMITE ACCIDENTS.

Some of the Stuff May Remain After a Charge is Exploded.

"It is generally supposed that when a charge of dynamite has exploded it is all over—that the entire charge has been consumed," said a "hard rock" man who has worked in mines, in river tunnels and other places where high explosives are used. "This supposition, however, is not correct," he continued. "Sometimes particles of dynamite will be blown out with the broken rock. Then it becomes a menace to the workmen. It is a favorite practice of men who are waiting or resting to sit on a pile of 'muck,' as the broken rock is called, and to jab into it with a pick or a candlestick or some other steel thing, much the same as a Yankee will whistle while he talks or thinks. If the steel strikes one of these bits of dynamite that has not gone off, because the glycerin in it has started to run or because a fragment of it has been crystallized, there will be an explosion. The chances are that not one of the group of men sitting around will escape injury.

"Another frequent cause of accidents is that sometimes when the dynamite explodes and tears out the rock a small quantity of it will be left in the bottom of the drill hole, unaffected by the shock. If the drill hole that remains happens to be pointed in the right direction a lazy drill runner is likely to take advantage of it and start his new hole in the old one in order to make a record or save time. The instant his drill commences to thud on the unexploded dynamite it goes off. The steel is driven back through the barrel of the machine, wrecking it and usually killing the drill runner. This explains many mysterious deaths that have been attributed to 'missed shots.'"

Judge for Yourself

When you get ready to buy a cream separator, don't be guided by what any separator salesman may claim for his machine. I don't ask you to take my "say so," either. While I am absolutely sure that the De Laval is by all odds the best machine, that doesn't prove anything to you. That's why I ask every intending cream separator buyer to

See and Try a De Laval

You can try any machine, or as many machines as you like, alongside the De Laval. All I ask is that you give the De Laval a fair trial before you place an order for a cream separator. If the De Laval doesn't run easier, skim cleaner and isn't easier to wash than any other machine, I won't ask you to keep it. The De Laval will talk for itself more convincingly than I can.
